

PUBLIC ART COLLECTION
DISTRICT OF NORTH VANCOUVER
LYNN VALLEY (Fall 2017)

Arboreus (After Rodchenko), Muse Atelier; Lynn Valley Village
This glass sculpture is suspended from the north wall of the elevator shaft. The piece consists of large, translucent glass panels painted with a digitally manipulated image of a giant first growth tree.

The Living Lounge, Paul Slipper & Mary Ann Lui, Lynn Valley Village
Stone sculptures playfully explore the line between perception and reality. Grab a coffee and relax in this unique sculptural living room.

Forrest Lore, Dana Irving; Lynn Valley District Library
The artist drew her inspiration for this mural from nearby Lynn Creek, capturing the magic and majesty of North Vancouver's raw beauty. Look for the mural in the Children's Section.

Heritage Storefront Memory, G.Henriquez; Lynn Valley Village
The two-story windows of the community meeting room located opposite the Library entrance, bear the image of the first Lynn Valley General Store which was at one time located within feet of the new library site.

Your Ancient Scribe, Kevin Head; (Pioneer Square) 1305 Lynn Valley Road
This bronze sculpture of local author Walter Draycott sits on a bench at Pioneer Square. Mr. Draycott was a well known amateur geologist, nature enthusiast and avid chronicler of Lynn Valley pioneer life.

Rock Report , Paul Slipper; (Archives Building) 3210 Mountain Hwy
An installation of over-sized book stacks, each one hand-carved from local BC granites and other stones reference the important historical documents housed inside the North Vancouver Archives facility.

Valley Stories, Blake Williams; (LV Recreation Centre) 3590 Mountain Hwy
Members of the local community worked with artist Blake Williams to create a collage of stories about Lynn Valley its people and its mountains.

PUBLIC ART COLLECTION
DISTRICT OF NORTH VANCOUVER
LYNN VALLEY (Fall 2017)

Eventually #2, Adam Kuby; Lynn Canyon Park (behind the Café)
Tucked into a meadow directly behind the Lynn Canyon Café, this environmental artwork addresses the natural forces at work in the Lynn Canyon environment.

Dance of the Odonata, Robert Keillor; Lynn Canyon Park Café
Nine dragonflies – each precision cast in porous glass, delicately coloured to replicate the markings of species indigenous to Lynn Canyon and Rice Lake.

Lynn Canyon Gate – this custom-designed trail gate highlights the connections between our parks and their natural and urban surroundings. Site-specific topographical maps placed within the "frame" references mountainous terrain and outdoor recreation opportunities.

Baird Street Benches, Peter Pierobon; 3175 Baird Road
An integrated bench installation located at the pedestrian entry to this Lynn Valley town house complex. Four benches are grouped around a central courtyard containing a kinetic weather sculpture.

First Light, Oliver Harwood & Marie Bortolotto; 3129 Sunnyhurst Drive
The street name Sunnyhurst is an old Anglo-Saxon phrase for a sunny grove of trees. Here, a sun disc with ancient markings is paired with tree totems to represent new families moving to the area.

Our Canyon Friends, Glen Anderson; 29th & Fromme Road.
In combination with a traffic calming project, three pebble mosaic installations were imbedded in the streetscape. The images depicted refer back to Lynn Valley's natural environment.

NS Youth Photography – Featured on two of the traffic signal boxes in Lynn Valley. ( 27th & Lynn Valley Road) & (Lynn Valley Road in front of McDonald's).